Opening Remarks

8

The struggle for democracy is profoundly different in the Facebook era. So is American diplomacy. What's unclear is whether the U.S. is capable of using the Internet to influence events

Global Economics

11

Medvedev the Modernizer

Russia's iPad-loving President wants his country to develop high-tech products as innovative and profitable as Silicon Valley's

Exporting coal to China: An environmental hot button p12
The push for SATs in China p14
Tom Keene's EconoChat p15
Suez Canal security fears p16

Davos

19

A Few Signs of Optimism

Although tensions between bankers and regulators surfaced, the mood at Davos 2011 was more hopeful than at the last few years' gatherings

Cut like Cameron or hedge like Obama? The discord over the best way to time government spending cuts p20
Pontificating and partying in the Alps p22

Companies & Industries

24

The CEO Scramble

Now that the recession is over, a growing number of boards are cleaning out the corner office

For Macau's gaming baron, Stanley Ho, a family feud p26
Gap can't get out of its rut p29
House parties with a commercial twist p30
Briefs: BP's dividend is back p31

Politics & Policy

33

Rallying for Real Estate

A vast housing lobby is mobilizing to fight GOP plans to eliminate federal mortgage guarantees

Playing chicken with deficits and the debt p35
Egypt's D.C. lobbyists p36
From envoy to candidate? p38
Financial firms' risk factors p39
Charlie Rose/Bill Gates p40

Technology

43

Smile, You're a Startup

Photo-sharing app Instagram has 1.7 million users, four employees, and zero revenue. The Web moves fast these days

A European shadow on China's solar industry p44
You've got no mail? Meh p45
WikiLeaks may be peering into hard drives for information p46
Innovator: Robert Curtis p48

Markets & Finance

51

The Whitney Furor

Meredith Whitney is under fire for predicting 50 to 100 municipal defaults. She isn't backing down, but she isn't offering specifics

Green stocks: Bright prospects for energy-efficiency plays p52
Easy money brings buyouts back to life p53
China stocks may soon rally 55
Bid & Ask: The week's deals p56

Ford's Mulally The road ahead could get bumpy

Features

58

The Youth Unemployment Bomb

From Cairo to London to Brooklyn, too many young people are jobless and disaffected. Inside the global effort to put the next generation to work p58

Mulally's Motor Company

Ford's CEO took a broken company and made it the world's most profitable automaker. The fairy-tale turnaround, however, is far from complete p66

Free Radical

Forget yachts. Peter Thiel is spending his billions on space travel, artificial intelligence, life extension, and paying top students not to go to college p72

Etc.

81

Requiem for the Reserved Parking Space

In an age of increasingly egalitarian office culture, the designated spot has become déclassé

Travel The battle for the world's most spectacularly outrageous, most exotically perk-laden vacation escapes p84
Fashion Russia's "concept" boutiques help aspiring oligarchs look like bohos p86
Next Life A onetime Citigroup analyst reinvents herself as a wine guru p88
Hands On The coolest gizmos and gadgets for the slopes p89
The Stack New business tomes from Russell Simmons and Deepak Chopra serve up bromides on enlightenment and management p90
Hard Choices To make Panera Bread rise, Ronald Shaich made a "bet the job" decision to abandon Au Bon Pain p92
